I just received this from Evelyn Huff

Hi there my Partee and Purtee cousins! I am so excited. I have found a cousin, Rus Partee who has graciously shared a photocopy of Lewis and Diana (Webb) Purtee's bible record:

Lewis Purtee son of John and Nancy Purtee born Febuary 15, 1802 in Colerain Twp, Ross Co, Ohio. Diana Webb, daughter of Obadiah and Catharine Webb born December 12, 1804, Pennsylvania. Lewis Purtee and Diana Webb married October 1827 in Defiance, Twp, Williams Co, Ohio by Geo Lance, Esq.

Births: Mary Ann August 22, 1827
George January 20, 1829
Joseph June 8, 1831
Rebecca May 8, 1833
Jemima April 9, 1835
Obadiah Webb September 2, 1837
John March 22, 1839
Ephraim (no date)
Lewis November 6, 1845 (my gr-grandfather who married Hannah Louisa Cassil)
Anna Maria December 17, 1849
Sarah Ann December 17, 1849

Marriages: David Miller and Mary A. Purtee Feb 15, 1851
Adam Geitgey and Rebecca Partee
Jospeh W. Partee and V. Lydia Wifoler
George W. Benner and Jemima Partee
Obadiah W Partee and Catherine R. Zeller Aug 25, 1861
Lewis Partee and Hannah L. Cassil, Dec 20, 1866
Alonzo Clement Partee was born the 13th day of December 1867
Charles Eddie Partee was born the 26th day of September 1869 (my grandfather)
Lewis Robinet Partee was born the 1st of September 1872
John Bernard Partee was born the 24th day of March 1877
Gertrude May Partee was born March 15, 1881

Deaths: Ephraim (no date)
Anna Maria August 9, 1851
Sarah Ann August 25, 1851
Lewis Partee April 30, 1853 (grandfather)
Diana Partee Feb 3, 1862 (grandmother)
Rebecca Partee, wife of A. Geitgey September 22, 1860
John Partee September 30, 1863 Army Hospital
George Partee unknown Army

Joseph W. Partee February 3, 1891
Mary Ann Miller (no date)
Jemima Benner (no date)
Lewis Partee July 31, 1909
Obadiah W. Partee Mary 22, 1922

Couple of interesting notes: There are twin girls in the family: Sarah Ann and Anna Maria who were born December 17, 1849 and both died as toddlers, in 1851 (see above). And, in this line it seems the spelling change went to Partee after David Miller married Mary A. Purtee in 1851. Can't tell you what this means, but... it's there.

Carol - thank you for this wonderful information! If I read correctly, Mary Ann was born several months before Lewis & Dianna married.

Do you have an email, or address for Rus so I can state my source?

Thanks!
Jane

My first impression of this photo was "These are all Purtee's". Notice the Purtee nose!

Evelyn Huff - Apr 23, 2005 Viewers | Reply to this item
I have to agree, and Dad's siblings all had the same nose too! It was this Lewis that spelled the name Partee, his father spelled it Purtee in the bible record I have.

I just received this from Evelyn Huff

Hi there my Partee and Purtee cousins! I am so excited. I have found a cousin, Rus Partee who has graciously shared a photocopy of Lewis and Diana (Webb) Purtee's bible record:

Lewis Purtee son of John and Nancy Purtee born Febuary 15, 1802 in Colerain Twp, Ross Co, Ohio. Diana Webb, daughter of Obadiah and Catharine Webb born December 12, 1804, Pennsylvania. Lewis Purtee and Diana Webb married October 1827 in Defiance, Twp, Williams Co, Ohio by Geo Lance, Esq.

Couple of interesting notes: There are twin girls in the family: Sarah Ann and Anna Maria who were born December 17, 1849 and both died as toddlers, in 1851 (see above). And, in this line it seems the spelling change went to Partee after David Miller married Mary A. Purtee in 1851. Can't tell you what this means, but... it's there.

Carol - thank you for this wonderful information! If I read correctly, Mary Ann was born several months before Lewis & Dianna married.

Do you have an email, or address for Rus so I can state my source?

Thanks!
Jane

I have found with other families of early setters when the marriage date is recorded after the birth of a child...
There may not have been a place to register the marriage. It may have taken a trip into a larger town to do so, or even waited for their town to grow enough to have a place to have records. Having the marriage recorded was not as important as the marriage itself. Just as births may have been recored months after the actual birth. We are thankful for the families that did take the time to register :)

John B. Partee House, Snohomish

<< Previous Next >>

Evelyn Huff - Sep 12, 2003 View | Viewers | Reply to this item

There is a Victorian House Tour scheduled for September 21, 2003 in Snohomish, WA. One of the featured homes is the home of John B. Partee and his wife, Katie Keefe. Katie's father presented the home at 224 Avenue A to them as a wedding present. The present owners, the Kelsey's have been in touch with me and have asked if I would like to come up and represent the Partee family at their home during the tour. The Kelsey's purchased John B.'s home last year and it has quite the history according to the title history. It had been "modernized" during the 50's, and Connie and her husband have gone in and restored it as much as can be done, as well as reinforcing the infrastructure, meaning a steel beam to stabilze the upper floor. Connie found an old hoop, coffee cans, advertisements from the early hardware store, a pair of little girl shoes (we like to believe that they belonged to Madeline Florence, John and Katie's little girl. Their boy died at birth and is buried in the GAR cemetery in Snohomish. We would all like to trace and find what happened to Madeline Florence. I'll post some photos of the house when available. John Bernard Partee was the son of Lewis Partee and Hannah Louisa Cassel, and Lewis was the son of Lewis Partee and Diana Webb, and this Lewis was the son of John Purtee and Nancy Williams, and oh, how I would love to find Nancy's line back!

Subject: Partee Cousins

Roena,

I noted with interest your e-mail response w hich was forwarded to me by Harold Peters who had a query on Cassett/Cassatt - and was glad to get your e-mail address.

Several months ago I wrote to you including information on my Partee/Purtee family from John and Nancy (Williams) Partee. John>Lewis & Diana Webb>Lewis & Hannah Louisa Cassil>Charles & Lucy Harriett Wilson>Howard Kenneth & Lillian Ford (my parents). You and I both descend from John and Nancy.

I am assuming from the statements in your message to Harold that you have not been able, yet, to determine John's father, whether he was a James or John. What about any family lore as to where John's father is buried or spent his last days.

But, some others questions from me: I am interested in obtaining a copy of the history of the family given in 1900, and would be very happy to pay for the costs of copying and postage for any materials that you could send me. And, have you been able to find anything on the family of Nancy Williams? I know that Diana Webb's parents were Obediah Webb and Catherine? Do you have anything more on the Webb family lines?

I hope to hear back from you soon,

Evelyn Partee Huff

The family has been busy with farming, sawmilling, trucking, bulldozing and with industry, etc. Besides farming, Forrest operated a sawmill and is known for cutting and hauling in logs and sawing them into lumber for other people. In the earlier years of his sawmilling when there wasn't the equipment to move logs that there is now, he would move his mill into a woods and saw logs for barn timber or for a church or other buildings. He would stay at this set-up until he had sawed all the lumber the owner and his neighbors needed. At home, Forrest built a shed for his mill, painted white, that has been a landmark. See Ref. p. 617 History of Defiance County, 1976, also page 335 History of Defiance County 1883, re: the early settlers.

Joseph Webb who stayed a single man. This land has been in the Webb family ever since. In 1827 Diane Webb married Lewis Partee and the same year Rebecca Webb married Laurence Partee. All are buried in the Webb Cemetery which had already been a burial ground as early as 1811 and before the Webbs acquired the land. Then Ephriam, Forrest Webb's grandfather, built a house that still stands, and about the same time that he was building the house, he donated to the public three acres of land that included the burial ground along the Tiffin River to be used as a cemetery. This was in the spring of 1863. That same autumn, he himself was buried there having taken ill with a cold he had caught while helping a neighbor thresh grain. His son born soon after this was also named Ephriam and is the father of Forrest. The cemetery was named Noble-Tiffin Twp. Union Cemetery but is still often called the Webb Cemetery. Back then there was a road along the east side of the cemetery that followed along the east side of the Tiffin River from Brunersburg to Evansport and that old road is still visible where the land has not been cultivated. The widow of Ephriam I then later married Jacob Bohrer. She was born Barbara Kuhn in Germany Oct. 11, 1837, and came to this country in 1844 or 1845 with her younger sister Annie, b. 1-14-1839, and two brothers, Henry C., b. 1-30-1841, and John C., b. 1-23-1843, and parents Christopher and Ann Mary Barbara (Borea) Kuhn. After coming to the U.S.A. brothers Christopher C. was born in 1845 and then Peter. (Annie Kuhn then married Fred Kellermeier and they had a daughter Emma who married Henry Niederhauser).

Ephriam I and Barbara (Kuhn) Webb's children were Anna Maria, b. 9-20-1859, married Wesley John Kencig; Obadiah, b. 8-10-1861, married Irene Estella Moll; and Ephriam II, b. 11-30-1863, married Mary (Mollie) Partee on 11-29-1888. Mary (Partee) Webb was the daughter of Parmenus and Anna (Kencig) Partee of Tiffin Twp., Defiance County. Anna Kencig was born in Switzerland 8-5-1841, and came to America with her parents John and Elizabeth (Meyers) Kencig. Her husband Parmenus Partee whom she married 10-9-1861, was the youngest son of Joseph and Lovinda (Kibble) Partee who were also among the first settlers of Brunersburg. Seven children of Parmenus and Anna (Kencig) Partee were William F., John W., Mary J. – wife of Ephriam Webb II –, Celia – wife of Elmer Diehl, Charles H., Rose B. – wife of J.C. Garber, and Edward B. Partee. Parmenus Partee, the father, was born April 22, 1839, in Springfield Twp., Williams County, Ohio, and died April 19, 1904. He was a member of the Evansport I.O.O.F. Lodge No. 489, joining the order in Dec. 1879. His father was Joseph, among the first settlers of Brunersburg. Joseph and Capt. John Partee were brothers. Capt. John Partee is buried in the Webb cemetery but Joseph Partee is buried in a cemetery near Stryker, Ohio.

Ephriam II and Mary (Partee) Webb are the parents of Florence Emma, b. 8-18-1891, married John B. Lehman, Forrest Ephriam, b. 2-20-1896, and Virgil Edward b. 5-27-1907, married Dorothy Sines. Forrest helped with farmwork and worked at the carpenter trade until he entered the armed forces on June 21, 1918. He saw active duty with the 138th Inf., 35th Div. in France and was honorably discharged May 17, 1919. After his return home he started to farm and on June 22, 1920, he married Laurena E. Lipp, a teacher in the one room schools of Delaware Twp., Defiance County and she was his faithful wife for 62 years. She was born in Delaware Twp., Defiance County, on Nov. 7, 1898, and passed away suddenly on May 5, 1982. She is laid to rest in the Webb cemetery (Noble-Tiffin Twp. Cemetery.) Forrest Webb
1896 - 1995

In 1991 when I talked with Forrest he said that it was 165 years ago since his great grandfather, Obadiah Webb settled the area in 1825. Obediah cane from PA with his family of three sons and four daughters in 1823. They traveled along the Ohio River to Cincinnati called Fort Washington then. And up the Wayne Trail to Fort Defiance. The patent deed for the land was issued to his son Joseph in 1825. Forrest thinks the deed was issued to Joseph because of his service to his Country in the Army. Obediah Webb was one of the first settlers at Brunersburg. They built a cabin along the Tiffin river and that's where the family stayed until Forest's grandfather, Ephrim Webb built a new frame house. In the Spring of 1863 Ephrim donated 3 acres as a public burying ground. It is the Noble–Tiffin Twp. Cemetery but locally known as the old Webb Cemetery. Ephrim died just a few months later in the fall of 1863. At the time he died he was building the new frame house. Forrest lived his entire life in this house. Forrest married Laurena R. Lipp in June 1920. Laurena was a school teacher and also a bee keeper the art of which she learned from her father. Forrest built a saw mill across from his house and did a thriving business sawing logs. One evening when cousin Annie and I were visiting Forrest she got behind the sawing rig and Forrest let her saw a log. Too dark for pictures but here they are.

Forrest Follows Webb Of Tradition

by Cathie Shaffer

Forrest Webb's Defiance County farm looks far different now than it did 153 years ago when his great-grandfather Obediah Webb first settled there.

There are paved roads, telephone and electric lines and tractors to do the work.

But Forrest's respect for the land is much like that of old Obediah.

"There were originally 80 acres to this farm," he said recently. "My great-grandfather came from Pennsylvania with his family in 1823, traveling along the Ohio River to Cincinnati—it was called Fort Washington then—and up the Wayne Trail to Fort Defiance.

"The patent deed for the land was issued to his son Joseph in 1825.

Forrest stands behind the tombstone of his grandfather, Ephraim Webb, who donated the cemetery land to Noble and Tiffin Townships over 100 years ago.

"I think the land was payment for service to his country in the army and that's why it was in Joseph's name instead of his father's."

The farm has been in the Webb family ever since.

"Obediah was one of the first settlers at Brunersburg," Forrest explained. "He came with his three sons and four daughters—his wife had died along the way, we think.

"They lived in a cabin they had built along the river and that's where the family stayed until my grandfather, Ephraim Webb, built a new log house."

One unique feature of Forrest's farm is an adjoining cemetery. But he had a simple explanation for it.

"From the time they first needed to bury someone, it was a cemetery," he said, looking back at the three-acre graveyard clearly visible from his house.

"So, in the spring of 1863, Ephraim donated those three acres as a public burial ground. It was to be known as the Noble-Tiffin Township Cemetery, but everyone has always called it the Webb cemetery."

Unfinished Business

Ephraim was buried in that cemetery just a few months later. He died in the fall of 1863 from a cold he'd contracted while helping a neighbor with his threshing.

"At the time he died, he was building a new log home," Forrest said. "His

A farmer, tired after working all day,
Went to bed early, with little to say.
He fell fast asleep, then lo and behold,
He found himself upon a tractor of gold.

Along one side of the soft, downy seat
Was a kitchenette with plenty to eat.

'Twas climate-controlled, he knew not how;

He had circle vision on the big TV screen;
The soil was like nothing he'd ever seen.

Or I glimpsed a bit of Heaven last night!"

wife—my grandmother, Barbara Kuhn Webb—was expecting a child, too. My father, named Ephraim after her husband, was born three weeks after his father's death."

The house was finished and Forrest's father lived there until after he married. Then he moved into a home he had built on the east part of the farm.

The farm had been added to and eventually equaled 120 acres. But, through the years, the land was split into two 60-acre farms.

Forrest owned just 60 acres until 14 years ago.

"My cousin owned the 62 acres behind me and he was a bachelor with no heirs," he said. "When he died, the land was put up for public auction.

"I wanted to see the farm together again. So I bought it at the auction."

The house that Ephraim built still stands, but it hasn't been lived in since Forrest's cousin died. Forrest and his wife Laurena live in the house his father built.

"I met my wife when she was a substitute teacher at the Webb school just across the field," Forrest said. "She needed a place to stay, so she boarded at our house.

"I dated her for a while, then I went into the service in 1918. When I got out in 1919, we started going out again and we got married in June of 1920."

When his parents bought another farm and moved there, Forrest took over the original one.

Operated Sawmill

Although Forrest enjoys farming, he was better known as a lumberman. He bought a Fordson tractor in 1922 and started a new career.

"I bought the tractor brand new—the first one in the area," he said. "I needed some boards cut just about then and I thought it would be a good idea if I had a sawmill since I already had the tractor to power it.

"So I bought one from an old man and then I got another used tractor. I was in business!"

Forrest went from woods to woods, from Okolona to Stryker to Defiance, sawing lumber for barns and other buildings.

"I'd move into a woods and saw logs until the owner had all the timber he needed," he said. "Back then, it was too hard to move logs. I'd spend a couple weeks there until I'd cut enough timber for a barn."

Although Forrest's farming techniques are far different from those of his great-grandfather, he's still concerned about the soil.

"I farm pretty old-fashioned compared to a lot of fellas," he said. "I don't have any big equipment or a lot of acres.

"But I was the first one to use a tractor on this farm. Actually, my ancestors couldn't have used tractors before that, even if there'd been such things. The fields were all full of stumps, but that didn't bother 'em when they planted it all by hand.

"It was my father who got rid of the stumps. He dug 'em out or blew 'em out to clear the fields."

Forrest farms about 60 acres, renting the rest to another farmer on a share-crop basis. He does no fall plowing, preferring to wait until spring.

"I like to leave a little something green on my fields," he said. "I think some cover stops soil erosion."

He doesn't plant any corn, mainly because he doesn't have the equipment for it any more.

But he DOES grow soybeans, wheat, oats and clover.

Not red clover, however. Sweet clover. The kind bees like.

"Not many people grow sweet clover," he said. "I use it as a rotation crop and sometimes I combine the seed to sell.

"We used to have bees and I can tell you one thing—sweet clover makes the best honey you'll ever taste. Laurena was the beekeeper. She learned it from her father."

Forrest still has that Fordson he boughtin 1922 along with several other old-timers and, although he realizes that most other farmers would be trading tractors like his for newer ones, he doesn't see any reason for it.

"I'm past 80," he said with a grin, "and I'm doing as much farming as I'll ever want to do. Besides, I have a lot of equipment.

"Back in my grandfather's day, you could put all the equipment you used in the average sitting room.

"Things were simpler then, and men didn't farm big farms. It was hard work with walking plows and hand planters.

"This farm's been in my family for a century and a half and the land's been cared for all that time. I want to see it stay that way."

wife—my grandmother, Barbara Kuhn Webb—was expecting a child, too. My father, named Ephraim after her husband, was born three weeks after his father's death."

The house was finished and Forrest's father lived there until after he married. Then he moved into a home he had built on the east part of the farm.

The farm had been added to and eventually equaled 120 acres. But, through the years, the land was split into two 60-acre farms.

Forrest owned just 60 acres until 14 years ago.

"My cousin owned the 62 acres behind me and he was a bachelor with no heirs," he said. "When he died, the land was put up for public auction.

"I wanted to see the farm together again. So I bought it at the auction."

The house that Ephraim built still stands, but it hasn't been lived in since Forrest's cousin died. Forrest and his wife Laurena live in the house his father built.

"I met my wife when she was a substitute teacher at the Webb school just across the field," Forrest said. "She needed a place to stay, so she boarded at our house.

"I dated her for a while, then I went into the service in 1918. When I got out in 1919, we started going out again and we got married in June of 1920."

When his parents bought another farm and moved there, Forrest took over the original one.

Operated Sawmill

Although Forrest enjoys farming, he was better known as a lumberman. He bought a Fordson tractor in 1922 and started a new career.

"I bought the tractor brand new—the first one in the area," he said. "I needed some boards cut just about then and I thought it would be a good idea if I had a sawmill since I already had the tractor to power it.

"So I bought one from an old man and then I got another used tractor. I was in business!"

Forrest went from woods to woods, from Okolona to Stryker to Defiance, sawing lumber for barns and other buildings.

"I'd move into a woods and saw logs until the owner had all the timber he needed," he said. "Back then, it was too hard to move logs. I'd spend a couple weeks there until I'd cut enough timber for a barn."

Although Forrest's farming techniques are far different from those of his great-grandfather, he's still concerned about the soil.

"I farm pretty old-fashioned compared to a lot of fellas," he said. "I don't have any big equipment or a lot of acres.

"But I was the first one to use a tractor on this farm. Actually, my ancestors couldn't have used tractors before that, even if there'd been such things. The fields were all full of stumps, but that didn't bother 'em when they planted it all by hand.

"It was my father who got rid of the stumps. He dug 'em out or blew 'em out to clear the fields."

Forrest farms about 60 acres, renting the rest to another farmer on a share-crop basis. He does no fall plowing, preferring to wait until spring.

"I like to leave a little something green on my fields," he said. "I think some cover stops soil erosion."

He doesn't plant any corn, mainly because he doesn't have the equipment for it any more.

But he DOES grow soybeans, wheat, oats and clover.

Not red clover, however. Sweet clover. The kind bees like.

"Not many people grow sweet clover," he said. "I use it as a rotation crop and sometimes I combine the seed to sell.

"We used to have bees and I can tell you one thing—sweet clover makes the best honey you'll ever taste. Laurena was the beekeeper. She learned it from her father."

Forrest still has that Fordson he boughtin 1922 along with several other old-timers and, although he realizes that most other farmers would be trading tractors like his for newer ones, he doesn't see any reason for it.

"I'm past 80," he said with a grin, "and I'm doing as much farming as I'll ever want to do. Besides, I have a lot of equipment.

"Back in my grandfather's day, you could put all the equipment you used in the average sitting room.

"Things were simpler then, and men didn't farm big farms. It was hard work with walking plows and hand planters.

Forrest Follows Webb Of Tradition

by Cathie Shaffer

Forrest Webb's Defiance County farm looks far different now than it did 153 years ago when his great-grandfather Obediah Webb first settled there.

There are paved roads, telephone and electric lines and tractors to do the work.

But Forrest's respect for the land is much like that of old Obediah.

"There were originally 80 acres to this farm," he said recently. "My great-grandfather came from Pennsylvania with his family in 1823, traveling along the Ohio River to Cincinnati—it was called Fort Washington then—and up the Wayne Trail to Fort Defiance.

"The patent deed for the land was issued to his son Joseph in 1825.

Forrest stands behind the tombstone of his grandfather, Ephraim Webb, who donated the cemetery land to Noble and Tiffin Townships over 100 years ago.

"I think the land was payment for service to his country in the army and that's why it was in Joseph's name instead of his father's."

The farm has been in the Webb family ever since.

"Obediah was one of the first settlers at Brunersburg," Forrest explained. "He came with his three sons and four daughters—his wife had died along the way, we think.

"They lived in a cabin they had built along the river and that's where the family stayed until my grandfather, Ephraim Webb, built a new log house."

One unique feature of Forrest's farm is an adjoining cemetery. But he had a simple explanation for it.

"From the time they first needed to bury someone, it was a cemetery," he said, looking back at the three-acre graveyard clearly visible from his house.

"So, in the spring of 1863, Ephraim donated those three acres as a public burial ground. It was to be known as the Noble-Tiffin Township Cemetery, but everyone has always called it the Webb cemetery."

Unfinished Business

Ephraim was buried in that cemetery just a few months later. He died in the fall of 1863 from a cold he'd contracted while helping a neighbor with his threshing.

"At the time he died, he was building a new log home," Forrest said. "His vation as much as we were ten years ago. There's probably more soil erosion now because of the way we fall plow—and the wildlife doesn't have as much food or a place to run like they did when crop residue was left over the winter."

Jesse Winslow of Waterville-Neapolis Road, Waterville says, "That's a good question because there are lots of things involved in soil conservation. Farming is much different now than it was 10 or 15 years ago and it's changing more every year. The ground is also being cleaned off more and that makes some difference, too. It's only natural that by cleaning off trees, the wind will have more effect on erosion. And today, just about all the farmers are trying to get their plowing done in the fall and that has a harmful effect on water run-off."

Fred and Mable Feather of Rt. 1, Grand Rapids say, "Farmers are improving their practices more and more. On our place, the bushels-per-acre yield has risen much higher than in the past. But some farmers are tearing out all their woods and overworking the land. And the way cities are expanding, they tear up farmland and put in houses, shopping centers and trailer parks. The way they're going, it's hard to tell what the future generations are going to live on!"

Alvin Schaller of 13237 Five Point Road, Perrysburg says, "Oh, I think so. I think I've always been conscious of it, but now I suppose I'm more conscious of using additional lime and getting better drainage."

Eldean Rhoades took a break from his farming activities east of Berkey to take a drink from a tile drainage outlet. He says the water is soft, cool and pure. He wonders if there's a way to teach the general public that they are settling for second rate drinking water by sipping treated sewage water from ditches.

Merle Wagner of Rt. 4, Wauseon says, "Really, yes. I don't like to plow out my fence rows like I used to. It leaves room for wildlife. In the fall, I have one field I leave open until spring."

Mrs. Richard (Mildred) Faulhaber of Rt. 2, Montpelier says, "Yes, I think we are. At least we're doing more about it than we used to. We're using more grass waterways and trying not to let the run-off areas get too bad. And we've got about 40 little pine trees to plant this spring for a windbreak."

plowing either because of wind and water erosion. But I can see why some big farmers have to resort to that."

Dick Hertzfeld of Noward Road, Waterville says, "I guess I am, somewhat. But I've thought about soil conservation for as long as I can remember. We've always had a soil cover crop and we use a chisel plow. They both help cut down wind erosion."

T.R. Jones of Rt. 1, Lyons says, "Well, when you talk about soil conservation around here, you're talking about tiling. In the old days, we put tile in anywhere there seemed to be a wet spot. But in time, other wet areas developed between those strings. Things are different now and we're putting in four or five strings of tile every few years. Good soil conservation also means that you've got to watch the ditch banks by staying back a little and letting the sod grow."

Mrs. Leonard Wilhelm of Weston Road, Rudolph says, "Definitely! I've become more aware of any type of conservation these past few years, but especially the trees. The way brush, fencerows and woods are being taken out, there's nothing to stop the wind and water from carrying the soil away. But 30 years ago, who would have thought that taking out a woodlot would cause so many problems now? We've been trying to replace the trees that aren't good anymore around home. We've planted ten shade trees and eight fruit trees in the last few years."

CHARLIE'S FARM

When the bridge was completed, it was just the way the state had requested—with plenty of room for barges to use the canal below it.

"You know," Charlie said, "there was never a boat that came through this canal after the bridge was built!

There were some log rafts—you know, logs tied together—that floated down to the sawmill in Napoleon, but there wasn't one boat!"

He's hoping that if the state does become interested in the old canal, it will finally be restored.

"Once I heard the state was going to clean up the canal from Independence to Florida," he said, "but nothing ever came of it.

"It's awful down in there—there are dead trees and everything else. I wish somebody could tell me what happened to the dredging."

Although the canal along Charlie's property is in better shape, it shows slow deterioration.

"It's probably filled in a couple feet," he said, "but it still has its banks.

"It holds water, maybe six to eight inches, but the water only moves when it rains. In the hot months, it dries up completely. You can walk on the canal bottom then.

"I'd like to see it cleaned up and preserved. If I could buy it back from the state—and I hear they are starting to sell the canal to the farmers—I'd buy it, clean it up and make a pond down there."

Operated Sawmill

Although Forrest enjoys farming, he was better known as a lumberman. He bought a Fordson tractor in 1922 and started a new career.

"I bought the tractor brand new—the first one in the area," he said. "I needed some boards cut just about then and I thought it would be a good idea if I had a sawmill since I already had the tractor to power it.

"So I bought one from an old man and then I got another used tractor. I was in business!"

Forrest went from woods to woods, from Okolona to Stryker to Defiance, sawing lumber for barns and other buildings.

"I'd move into a woods and saw logs until the owner had all the timber he needed," he said. "Back then, it was too hard to move logs. I'd spend a couple weeks there until I'd cut enough timber for a barn."

Although Forrest's farming techniques are far different from those of his great-grandfather, he's still concerned about the soil.

"I farm pretty old-fashioned compared to a lot of fellas," he said. "I don't have any big equipment or a lot of acres.

"But I was the first one to use a tractor on this farm. Actually, my ancestors couldn't have used tractors before that, even if there'd been such things. The fields were all full of stumps, but that didn't bother 'em when they planted it all by hand.

"It was my father who got rid of the stumps. He dug 'em out or blew 'em out to clear the fields."

Forrest farms about 60 acres, renting the rest to another farmer on a share-crop basis. He does no fall plowing, preferring to wait until spring.

"I like to leave a little something green on my fields," he said. "I think some cover stops soil erosion."

He doesn't plant any corn, mainly because he doesn't have the equipment for it any more.

But he DOES grow soybeans, wheat, oats and clover.

Not red clover, however. Sweet clover. The kind bees like.

"Not many people grow sweet clover," he said. "I use it as a rotation crop and sometimes I combine the seed to sell.

"We used to have bees and I can tell you one thing—sweet clover makes the best honey you'll ever taste. Laurena was the beekeeper. She learned it from her father."

Forrest still has that Fordson he boughtin 1922 along with several other old-timers and, although he realizes that most other farmers would be trading tractors like his for newer ones, he doesn't see any reason for it.

"I'm past 80," he said with a grin, "and I'm doing as much farming as I'll ever want to do. Besides, I have a lot of equipment.

"Back in my grandfather's day, you could put all the equipment you used in the average sitting room.

"Things were simpler then, and men didn't farm big farms. It was hard work with walking plows and hand planters.

"This farm's been in my family for a century and a half and the land's been cared for all that time. I want to see it stay that way."

When the bridge was completed, it was just the way the state had requested—with plenty of room for barges to use the canal below it.

"You know," Charlie said, "there was never a boat that came through this canal after the bridge was built!

There were some log rafts—you know, logs tied together—that floated down to the sawmill in Napoleon, but there wasn't one boat!"

He's hoping that if the state does become interested in the old canal, it will finally be restored.

"Once I heard the state was going to clean up the canal from Independence to Florida," he said, "but nothing ever came of it.

"It's awful down in there—there are dead trees and everything else. I wish somebody could tell me what happened to the dredging."

Although the canal along Charlie's property is in better shape, it shows slow deterioration.

"It's probably filled in a couple feet," he said, "but it still has its banks.

"It holds water, maybe six to eight inches, but the water only moves when it rains. In the hot months, it dries up completely. You can walk on the canal bottom then.

"I'd like to see it cleaned up and preserved. If I could buy it back from the state—and I hear they are starting to sell the canal to the farmers—I'd buy it, clean it up and make a pond down there."

On 1825 Homestead

Forrest Follows Webb Of Tradition

by Cathie Shaffer

Forrest Webb's Defiance County farm looks far different now than it did 153 years ago when his great-grandfather Obediah Webb first settled there.

There are paved roads, telephone and electric lines and tractors to do the work.

But Forrest's respect for the land is much like that of old Obediah.

"There were originally 80 acres to this farm," he said recently. "My great-grandfather came from Pennsylvania with his family in 1823, traveling along the Ohio River to Cincinnati—it was called Fort Washington then—and up the Wayne Trail to Fort Defiance.

"The patent deed for the land was issued to his son Joseph in 1825.

Forrest stands behind the tombstone of his grandfather, Ephraim Webb, who donated the cemetery land to Noble and Tiffin Townships over 100 years ago.

"I think the land was payment for service to his country in the army and that's why it was in Joseph's name instead of his father's."

The farm has been in the Webb family ever since.

"Obediah was one of the first settlers at Brunersburg," Forrest explained. "He came with his three sons and four daughters—his wife had died along the way, we think.

"They lived in a cabin they had built along the river and that's where the family stayed until my grandfather, Ephraim Webb, built a new log house."

One unique feature of Forrest's farm is an adjoining cemetery. But he had a simple explanation for it.

"From the time they first needed to bury someone, it was a cemetery," he said, looking back at the three-acre graveyard clearly visible from his house.

"So, in the spring of 1863, Ephraim donated those three acres as a public burial ground. It was to be known as the Noble-Tiffin Township Cemetery, but everyone has always called it the Webb cemetery."

Unfinished Business

Ephraim was buried in that cemetery just a few months later. He died in the fall of 1863 from a cold he'd contracted while helping a neighbor with his threshing.

"At the time he died, he was building a new log home," Forrest said. "His Heaven?

A farmer, tired after working all day,
Went to bed early, with little to say.
He fell fast asleep, then lo and behold,
He found himself upon a tractor of gold.

The engine purred with unlimited power,
In the cab was a bathroom with a shower.
Along one side of the soft, downy seat
Was a kitchenette with plenty to eat.

'Twas climate-controlled, he knew not how;
Hitched to the rear was a 20-bottom plow.
He had circle vision on the big TV screen;
The soil was like nothing he'd ever seen.

He awoke with a start; it was breaking day.
"Mother, wake up, I have something to say.
I dreamed a dream that was a pure delight,
Or I glimpsed a bit of Heaven last night!"

wife—my grandmother, Barbara Kuhn Webb—was expecting a child, too. My father, named Ephraim after her husband, was born three weeks after his father's death."

The house was finished and Forrest's father lived there until after he married. Then he moved into a home he had built on the east part of the farm.

The farm had been added to and eventually equaled 120 acres. But, through the years, the land was split into two 60-acre farms.

Forrest owned just 60 acres until 14 years ago.

"My cousin owned the 62 acres behind me and he was a bachelor with no heirs," he said. "When he died, the land was put up for public auction.

"I wanted to see the farm together again. So I bought it at the auction."

The house that Ephraim built still stands, but it hasn't been lived in since Forrest's cousin died. Forrest and his wife Laurena live in the house his father built.

"I met my wife when she was a substitute teacher at the Webb school just across the field," Forrest said. "She needed a place to stay, so she boarded at our house.

"I dated her for a while, then I went into the service in 1918. When I got out in 1919, we started going out again and we got married in June of 1920."

When his parents bought another farm and moved there, Forrest took over the original one.
